DESCRIPTION

The practical courses are 6-day courses beginning on Monday 09.00 and ending on Friday 18.00 with a freesail day on Saturday. Candidates are expected to be at our base on Sunday night at the latest, where they will be welcomed by their instructor and briefed about the yacht and the course.

ACCOMMODATION

Depending on your reservation and the yacht that it will be used for the course, you will be accommodated on a bunk bed, or a double bed cabin or saloon berth. Accommodation may be shared and saloon berths may be used. The size of our tuition yachts is 36ft to 46ft, 3 – 4 cabins and 2 – 4 heads. All of our tuition yachts are fully coded, very well maintained, fully equipped and comply with the Greek and International safety regulations.

FOOD ON BOARD

At aegeanMode, we see your training as an excellent chance to acquaint you with Mediterranean food and cuisine. We'll be supplying fresh, high-quality provisions for your culinary needs. Throughout the course, an array of locally sourced, fresh products will be accessible on the yacht. We ensure ample provisions for breakfast and lunch, as well as for the dinner during the night sail. If you have any allergies or specific dietary requirements, please get in touch with us so that we can include the necessary items in our provision list. For individuals with severe allergies, we recommend reaching out before making a booking.

WHAT SHOULD I BRING

In the peak season, temperatures soar in the Mediterranean, and the sun can be intense, making sun protection essential. It's advisable to have sunglasses, a hat, and sun protection cream on hand. If you're not accustomed to consuming ample water or are prone to dehydration, consider bringing rehydration sachets for added precaution. Despite the warmth during the day, evenings in the high season may bring a slight chill. Therefore, including a light jacket or fleece in your belongings is recommended along with the rest of your essentials.
